My College Self

Lesson
Learned

Coming into college, I never needed to study. I've since learned that no longer applies. I'm now taking time each day to study, and I've found myself improving as we continue.

Community
Connection

I joined the Lunabotics team the first month of the semester, and I'm now the controls lead. During my time on the team, we've been able to attend various outreach events, including two at Discovery World.

Situation I am Proud Of

I received an internship offer from Cognex, and expect to receive one from Qualcomm as well.

Situation I
Would Redo

The first month or so of college, I spent a lot of time inside working on classwork and personal projects. If I could redo this situation, I would spend more time outside, when the weather was good.
